Public Comment:

- Edgar Largaespada, Director of Industry Strategy, Partner4Work
 - Clean energy is an emerging sector in the Pittsburgh area. They have a grant from Labor and Industry for clean energy and have also been awarded a recent grant for building pathway for the green infrastructure. The first program that the employers want to register is with the solar installer occupation.

Ex-Officio Member Report: Office of Vocational Rehabilitation, PA Department of Labor and Industry (Jeffrey Seabury, Vocational Rehabilitation Specialist)

- October is National Disability Employment Awareness month, so they are trying to spread the word about the importance of inclusive jobs across the nation.
- His office is continuing to work with several employers across the state to give them the opportunity to expand approved registered apprenticeship and pre-apprenticeship programs.
- They will be presenting at the PWDA conference in November and hope to see council present.

Ex-Officio Member Report: Unemployment Compensation Program, PA Department of Labor and Industry (Maria Macus, Deputy Secretary)

- August 2023 the unemployment rate was 3.5 percent and there were 226,000 individuals that were unemployed. The week ending October 7th had 9,166 regular initial unemployment claims.
- The average wait time on their phones was 18 minutes and the average time for emails and chat were in real time.

Ex-Officio Member Report: Workforce Development, PA Department of Labor and Industry (Daniel Kuba, Deputy Secretary)

- Deputy Secretary Daniel Kuba participated in an Apprenticeship summit in Elk County. The local board coordinated this event that was made up of employers of all industries, post-secondary training providers, Secondary schools' career teched, community, economic, and workforce development agencies. A lot of the focus was on rural communities. They are seeing a decline in every single county in Pennsylvania except for Philadelphia and Pittsburgh. The Program Christ the King has CNA and LPN Programs. This is exciting because within the Commonwealth, we have an aging population, and we don't have enough health care workers to provide a support in services. This follows Governor Shapiros approach of new sector apprenticeships. Some of the ATO staff also attended this summit. They will continue to support local communities putting on these summits. This allows employers to make connections and find necessary resources to be successful.
- Deputy Secretary Daniel Kuba advised council that they are constantly moving forward in the Commonwealth workforce development system. They have been transitioning the entire system from the legacy system to a new platform. There is progress on the apprenticeship side of the system.
- There are 4 groups of individuals that any employer or program will have available when trying to fill open positions. The first group is reentry, and these are individuals who have just been incarcerated. These folks are ready and eager to begin working. The second group is recovery. These are people who struggle with diseases involving drugs and alcohol. Unfortunately, this can take over and individuals do lose their jobs. There have been several advocates come forward, looking towards the addiction counselor positions. There is a chance of apprenticeship programs in this field, in the future. The third group of potential employees are immigrants. The immigrant population is a key component in filling these openings in employment. This group cannot be working without a work certification or some form of approval by federal entity. The final group of possible employees are individuals who began unemployment during the pandemic. There were 430,000 people that filed for unemployment during the pandemic and received at least 1 claim. These people are still out of the workforce. One of our employers within the PA CareerLink is launching an outreach campaign where they will be following up with these people through email, phone, etc. This will survey and find out why this group is no longer working. There has been a consultant hired to record these findings. The goal is to help these individuals get back into work and regular occupations. Two primary reasons people are staying out of employment are childcare and transportation. As part of Labor and Industry, they are looking at the bureau of admin services in creation of a childcare apprenticeship program. They are looking to build this program within the state system to allow more people to come in and work within our department.
- Lisa Williams asked Daniel Kuba if Christ the King was the correct program with the CNA Program. Daniel Kuba responded that Christ the King was correct and that this is a long-term healthcare facility based out of DuBois.
- Jon O'Brien brought up the 4 groups of Individuals Daniel Kuba mentioned in his report. He advised everyone that he and Deputy Secretary Kuba had met over a different group and that was veterans. Daniel Kuba then went into depth on this topic stating that there are state dollars that come in to support industry partnerships. There is about 200,000 dollars that help support veteran services, but it is only available in the Southeast. Thirteen percent of Pennsylvania's population is veterans, and that number is beginning to decline. This means the population is aging, and when people finish up their service, they are not coming back to Pennsylvania. They are starting to put out new grants to support this group in different areas of the Commonwealth. He then said that he has about 50 disabled veterans on his staff that provide face to face assistance to the veteran community. He provided us with the information from one of his most recent meetings, and one of the biggest issues they discussed, is the suicide rate in the veteran communities. The Department of Labor and Industry is coordinating with the Department of Military and Veteran Affairs. This Department is making sure the grants that are put out are hitting the large, underserved veteran services. He advised council that when the veterans go through the transition assistance program and are getting ready to leave service, they want them to come back to Pennsylvania.

- Gregory Chambers was telling Daniel Kuba about a military program, Workshop for Warriors, in advanced manufacturing that is looking to expand nationwide.

Report: U.S. Department of labor (Nicholas Burdick, Multi-State Navigator, Office of Apprenticeship)

- They started a new initiative to push for more advanced manufacturing programs and that will include clean energy. This sprint will continue until the white house decides to end it.
